Undoing Culture:

Undoing Culture Mike Featherstone, 1995-09-21 Written with the clarity and insight that readers have come to expect of Mike Featherstone Undoing Culture is a notable contribution to our understanding of modernism and postmodernism It explores the formation and deformation of the cultural sphere and the effects on culture of globalization Against many orthodox postmodernist accounts the author argues that it is wrong to regard our present state of fragmentation and dislocation as an epochal break Existing interdependencies and power balances are not so easily broken down Nonetheless some important cultural changes have occurred since World War II In particular the book examines some of the processes which have uncoupled culture from the social the erosion of the ideal of the heroic life in the face of the onslaught from consumerism and the deformation of culture and the rise of new forms of identity development It explains why culture has gained a more significant role in everyday life and also why it has come to preoccupy the Academy in recent years Mike Featherstone looks at the effects of the multiplication of cultural goods and images on our ability to read culture and develop fixed meanings and relationships He highlights the importance of the global in attempting to cope with the objective difficulties of cultural overproduction The book concludes that the rise of non Western nation states with different cultural frames produces different reactions of modernity making it more appropriate to refer to global modernities

Abandon All Hope - Consumerism and Loss of Identity in Bret Easton Ellis's American Psycho As an Example of Blank Fiction Anja Schiel,2008-04 Thesis M A from the year 2005 in the subject American Studies Literature grade 1 5 University of Hamburg Sprach Literatur und Medienwissenschaft language English abstract Bret Easton Ellis s American Psycho has been labeled many things from Brat Pack Fiction to Generation X to Minimal Realism While the classification of the novel might be difficult and it has often been misunderstood for its extremely violent scenes what is clear to the attentive reader is its critique of consumer culture Critics have acknowledged an emergence of a large number of writings dealing with this topic in contemporary American literature in the recent past These novels focus on the relationship of American youth with consumer culture with a seemingly non elaborate content and style Attempts of explaining this kind of writing which has also been called fiction of insurgency new narrative downtown writing and punk fiction range from millennial

angst to the classification of this literary movement as part of the postmodern culture. What seems clear is that these narrations are closely related to the society they have been created in. The way these texts incorporate products of their time as a constant accompanying element places them very clearly in a specific time period. The apparent non-existence of complexity concerning the style, which at times reminds the reader of a movie script or a sequence of an MTV video, has in the case of American Psycho caused many critics to classify the novel as boring and deny the author the status of an artist. Exactly this seeming meaninglessness of these novels argues in favor of a term introduced by critics James Annesley and Elizabeth Young: Blank fiction or Blank Generation Fiction. The term Blank fiction seems to capture perfectly the emptiness created by consumer culture that has found its way into these narratives not simply in its context but also by means of its language incorporating consumer goods.

Tourism, Culture & Communication, 2006. Sights of Contestation Kwok-kan Tam, Wimal Dissanayake, Terry Siu-han Yip, 2002. The fourteen essays presented in this volume examine the diverse ways in which cultural products are shaped and re-shaped in public spaces in China, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Japan, and some other countries in the Pacific in their continuing encounters with the forces of localism and globalism. Various theories of globalisation have been proposed since the 1970s to predict the trend of development toward homogenisation and explain the tensions hitherto created. However diverse the theories may be, there is one fact that assumes the form of a challenge: As the world has become seemingly less and less divergent in its shrinkage, the traditional categories of cultural division and opposition, such as the East versus the West, may no longer be adequate in analysing the world we live in today. Paradoxically enough, this very shrinkage and restructuring of the world has the effect of focusing more sharply on questions of localism, identity, and cultural roots. This is in fact a moment in history when the local and the global are co-implicated in complex and unanticipated ways. How do cultural workers, who are primarily writers, intellectuals, journalists, filmmakers, and educators in Asia and the Pacific, respond to this challenging phenomenon? How do they conceptualise it? What are the prospects and problems they foresee with regard to their own societies and cultures? These are questions of utmost significance as one seeks to come to terms with East Asia and the emerging Pacific as a space of contestation and resistance in the global-local process of cultural production. The fourteen essays collected in this book certainly represent the views of some of the prominent scholars in the region.
