An Overview* Claudia Brunsch, 2007-03-23 Essay from the year 2006 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 1 5 University of Hildesheim Englische Sprache und Didaktik language English abstract Therefore intercultural communication competence has become a theme which concerns everybody and which will even become more and more important in our world of globalization In order to avoid misunderstandings or even hostile attitudes ending up in conflicts in order to live peacefully in the global village and be able to solve the growing number of global problems which do not stop at national borders the ability to understand people from different cultures and to communicate competently with them has taken on an extreme urgency. However, achieving this aim sounds easier than it is. To communicate competently with people from other cultures, it is not enough to speak the same language as they do. Even though two people speak the same language, it is possible that they do not understand each other. This thesis becomes obvious in the following critical incident: A Japanese negotiating with a German business partner says that the deal will be difficult. When the German asks how his company can help to solve the problem, the Japanese is confused. While the Japanese meant that the deal is off, the German thought there were only some obstacles which can be overcome. This phenomenon can be explained due to the fact that both speakers know the linguistic rules of the language such as grammar and vocabulary, but they are not aware of the cultural norms, attitudes, and behavior of their communication partner. They have linguistic competence but no intercultural communication competence. This lack of intercultural communication competence and the ignorance of cultural differences might cause many misunderstandings. In order to understand the sources of misunderstandings and to be aware of intercultural communication problems, it is necessary to know and to understand the concept of communication. Since it is not possible to transmit messages directly from one person's brain to that of another person, we have to put our ideas into codes that can be transmitted. Consequently, communication can be described as an exchange of messages between a sender and a receiver. In this process, the sender encodes the message, which means that he produces a set of symbols, and the receiver has to decode the message, which means that he tries to understand the meaning of the symbols by interpreting or making sense of them.

Stereotyping as a phenomenon in intercultural communication
Claudia Brunsch, 2007-03-09 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies
Linguistics grade 1.5 University of Hildesheim Institut für Angewandte Sprachwissenschaft course Intercultural Communication language English abstract

Intercultural communication has become more and more important in a world where everything is becoming global. Few centuries ago, only international managers or diplomats needed to think about intercultural communication and its problems. These days, not exclusively international managers but ordinary people from different cultures come into contact with each other. This phenomenon can be explained due to various reasons. The internet makes it possible to communicate with people from all over the world. Modern technologies give people the chance to travel further and faster than ever before. Not only big firms but also all kinds of organizations act more and more globally instead of locally. The European Union allows people to move to other European countries to work and to live there. We live in a multicultural society with various cultures. Intercultural communication has become a theme which concerns everybody and which will even become more and more important in our world of globalization where people from all over the world come together and get in contact with each other every day.
