Unqualified Education:

Unqualified Education Gareth Lewis,2003 Reconstructions of Secondary Education John Gray,Andrew McPherson,David Raffe,2012-05-16 British secondary education has changed in major ways since 1945 This book examines some consequences and implications of both change and stability drawing on a unique series of national surveys of school leavers in Scotland The authors provide an empirical and theoretical account of central problems of contemporary schooling Their analysis covers certification curriculum and selection the effects of educational expansion trends in educational inequality the impact of comprehensive reorganisation truancy and alienation from schooling the explanation of differences in performance between schools and the implications for the public accountability of schools From these analyses the authors develop a critique of the theory of the education system that underpinned expansion They examine this theory s logical and empirical status as myth and elaborate how the political system and social science might jointly overcome some of the methodological difficulties that beset social and educational research Conditions of School Performance in Seven Countries Hans Döbert,Hans Döbert, Eckhard Klieme, Wendelin Sroka,Eckhard Klieme,Wendelin Sroka,2004 Academies and Educational Reform Elizabeth Leo,Phil Hearne,David Galloway,2010 Behind the headlines and controversy surrounding new academy schools many of their principals teachers and pupils have been quietly changing the culture of learning and achievement in some of the most disadvantaged communities in England While successful innovation and change is not unique to academies this book illustrates how the academy policy represents a significant opportunity to improve the life chances of their pupils Too much attention has focused on unanswerable questions about whether academies are better or worse than their predecessor or comparable schools in their neighbourhood Too little focus has been on what policy makers and practitioners can learn from the different and often conflicting perspectives of the key players notably sponsors architects principals parents and pupils in order to create a school that can truly serve their community with distinction The development of Academies is a high profile initiative which has given rise to a large number of publications However as the analysis in this book illustrates many of these consist either of polemic or of attempts at evaluation with limited sophistication or success By asking the question what can be learned from the Academies programme this book provides a different perspective The range of interviews with key informants provides concrete original data around which the discussion and analysis are skilfully woven Mike Fleming University of Durham UK Not only do the authors draw upon interviews with a wide range of practitioners working in Academies but they also give the reader access to the thinking of leading strategists in the development of their philosophy most notably Lord Adonis This in its own right recommends the book as a text of critical importance More than this however the authors undertake a painstaking but always riveting analysis of the successes and failures of this central strategy in New Labour educational policy Derrick Armstrong University of Sydney Australia China's Belt and Road Initiative in Africa R. Mireille Manga Edimo,Julien Rajaoson,2025-05-19 This book provides insight into the economic partnerships between African governments and China offered by the Belt and Road Initiative. It examines the Belt and Road Initiative from a macro and microeconomic perspective to present a detailed understanding of the transformation of African development policies since the initiative began. Particular attention is given to the historical context behind the Belt and Road Initiative, the financing of infrastructure and public services in Africa, the spread of technology from China to Africa, China's position within the global political order, African energy markets, and the development of special economic zones. This book grounds analysis of the Belt and Road Initiative within specific policies and case studies from Africa. It will be relevant to students, researchers, and practitioners interested in development economics and the political economy.

Countries in Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA) are trying to make their proposed goal of universal primary education a reality. Given the budgetary constraints, it is natural to seek to increase efficiency and to reduce the cost of inputs. Teachers' salaries account for over 90 percent of the primary school recurrent budget. Therefore, the analysis of teachers' salaries is crucial to forecasting primary school expenditures and developing policies to rationalize teachers' cost. Until now, a comparative study of teachers' salaries for SSA did not exist. The present study remedies this situation. The study analyzes factors affecting teachers' salaries in general and describes categories of teachers' salary structures and pay supplements in SSA countries. With the use of a computer forecasting model, this study provides forecasts of teacher cost for the next 2 decades for 20 SSA countries under varying hypotheses and suggests steps to facilitate planning of teacher salaries in SSA Author British Medical Journal ,1883 A Survey of the Training and Employment of Scientists and Engineers in South Africa: The supply and demand in respect of teachers of science and mathematics in South African high schools as at the first Tuesday in June, 1958 South Africa.
