United States Transformed:

Subsidy Regulation and State Transformation in North America, the GATT and the EU Robert O'Brien, 2016-07-27 Recent international subsidy regulation is contributing to a dual transformation of the state. The state is increasingly liberal as expenditure is channelled into particular activities and it is less sovereign as key decision making authority is transferred to international institutions. Subsidy conflicts emerge as the attempts by states, firms and social forces to adapt to an increasingly global economy collide with variations of liberal development models. This study examines the distinct subsidy arrangements in North America, the GATT and the European Union to highlight this change in state structure and behaviour.

Rising Powers and State Transformation Shahar Hameiri, Lee Jones, John Heathershaw, 2020-07-10 Rising Powers and State Transformation advances the concept of state transformation as a useful lens through which to examine rising power states, foreign policymaking and implementation with chapters dedicated to China, Russia, India, Brazil, Indonesia and Saudi Arabia. The volume breaks with the prevalent tendency in International Relations (IR) scholarship to treat rising powers as unitary actors in international politics. Although a neat demarcation of the domestic and international domains on which the notion of unitary agency is premised has always been a myth, these states' uneven integration into the global political economy has eroded this perspective's empirical purchase considerably. Instead, this volume employs the concept of state transformation as a lens through which to examine rising power states' foreign policymaking and implementation. State transformation refers to the pluralisation of cross-border state agency via contested and uneven processes of fragmentation, decentralisation and internationalisation of state apparatuses. The volume demonstrates the significance of state transformation processes for explaining some of these states' key foreign policy agendas and outlines the implications for the wider field in IR. With chapters dedicated to all of today's most important rising power states, Rising Powers and State Transformation will be of great interest to scholars of IR, international politics and foreign policy. The chapters were originally published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly.

Childhood on the Farm Pamela Riney-Kehrberg, 2005 Those personal accounts resurrect the essential experience of children's work, play, education, family relations and coming of age from their own perspectives. Steering a middle path between the myth of wholesome farm life and the reality of work that was often extremely dangerous, Riney-Kehrberg shows both the best and the worst that a rural upbringing had to offer midwestern youth a time before mechanization forever changed the rural scene and radio broke the spell of isolation. Down on the farm, truancy was not uncommon and chores were shared across genders. Yet farm children managed to indulge in inventive play much of it homemade to supplement store bought toys and to get through the long spells between circuses

Geopolitics of a Changing Arctic. How do Russia, China and the United States Conceptualise the Changing Arctic? Fiona Kramer, 2024-10-18 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2023 in the subject Politics Topic International relations grade 1 3 University of Erfurt Staatswissenschaftliche Fakultät course Bachelorarbeit language English abstract This bachelorthesis examines the Arctic strategies of Russia China and the USA The three subjects of this study China Russia and the United States have different degrees of material interest in the Arctic which is rooted in tangible assets like oil gas and ice free shipping routes Among them China is a relatively recent participant in Arctic affairs whereas Russia and the United States hold prominent positions as influential players in the High North Over 60% of the Arctic landmass lies within their national borders While some of these interests can be quantified they also involve intricate and qualitative questions related to identity and the perception of other actors Though one thing connects all three states All have updated or published their first national Arctic strategy in the last 5 years detailing their Arctic ambitions for the future This indicates that the changing Arctic is responsible for a changed perception of the Arctic region which is worth exploring The exploration of this assumption through a qualitative content analysis provides useful insights allowing me to understand better how these states perceive the Arctic as a geographical space themselves and other actors This in turn creates a more meaningful picture of the Arctic political discourse shedding light on the perception each country creates about itself which may help us to understand why countries behave the way they do and even possibly predict how they might behave in the future
