The Granite Cliffs Rosemary Aitken, 2003 Victoria Flower motherless and nearing womanhood is beginning to chafe against the restrictions of her life as the vicar's only daughter in a remote Cornish mining town Her honourable and well meaning father though disillusioned by the impossibility of his spiritual task thinks he has found a suitable companion for her when he introduces a gentle musical young curate into the parish Indeed a friendship blossoms as Victoria finds a fellow sufferer in his rather gauche and awkward ways All this is to change however when an accident at the granite pit brings Victoria into close contact with stone worker Daniel Olds whose rugged muscularity she has already secretly admired and finds the admiration mutual However there is no possibility of a match Convention and society are against them and Dan is already promised to local girl Mollie Coombs who is not likely to give up her beau without a struggle The Curate too shows a determined side though he proves to have a secret of his own Set at a time when Edwardian convention was absolute and when the Penwith mining industry was in crisis and decline this book offers a lively glimpse at the social and economic realities Our earth and its story Robert Brown, 1893 Coastal Problems Heather Viles, Tom Spencer, 2014-02-25 As coastal populations burgeon problems of erosion pollution and coastal change are becoming ever more serious and necessitate scientifically informed management strategies This authoritative new study discusses the causes of and possible solutions to some of the more pressing problems at the coast against a background of the natural geomorphological and ecological workings of coastal environments A holistic approach to the understanding of coastal problems is suggested which integrates geomorphology ecology and society through a consideration of the basic processes at work Coastal problems are caused by both human and natural impacts often working in conjunction with each other thus drawing on their wide experience of temperate and tropical coasts the authors consider all types of coastal problems ranging from those produced entirely naturally to those where the human impact dominates Extensive use is made of case studies drawn from around the world from beach erosion along the Nigerian coast to the recovery of the Vietnamese mangroves from war damage A major theme of the book is that given recent downgrading of predictions of future sea level rise it is the distinctive geomorphological ecological and societal aspects of each coast which are the vital factors Coastal Problems brings together material vital to any attempts to understand and manage our coasts and will be of interest to all those concerned with the
