What is Diabetes?

Diabetes is a group of metabolic diseases characterized by a chronic elevation in the blood glucose levels. It occurs when the body does not produce enough insulin, or the insulin it produces does not work properly. Without the right amount of insulin, glucose cannot get to the cells and cause many health problems.

Types of Diabetes

There are three main types of diabetes: Type 1, Type 2, and Gestational Diabetes. Type 1 is an autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the beta cells in the pancreas, which produce insulin. Type 2 is a lifestyle-related disease where the body's cells become resistant to insulin. Gestational Diabetes occurs during pregnancy.

What is Insulin?

Insulin is a hormone produced by the pancreas that helps cells take up glucose. It acts like a key that unlocks the cells so that glucose can enter and be used for energy. Without insulin, glucose cannot get into the cells and cannot be used for energy.

The liver takes up glucose, converts it into glycogen and stores it.

Glucose signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

The conversion of glycogen into glucose is called gluconeogenesis and happens in the liver and kidneys.

Type 1 Diabetes: In this condition, the body does not produce enough insulin. This is because the immune system attacks and destroys the beta cells in the pancreas. The body cannot produce insulin, so glucose cannot get into the cells. This causes high blood sugar levels and other complications.

Type 2 Diabetes: In this condition, the body does not use insulin properly. This is because the cells become resistant to insulin. The body produces insulin, but the cells do not respond to it. This causes high blood sugar levels and other complications.

What is Glucose?

Glucose is a type of sugar and is the body's main source of energy. It is produced in the liver and is transported in the blood to the cells. Cells use glucose as fuel.

Glucose Metabolism

Glucose is a type of sugar and is the body's main source of energy. It is produced in the liver and is transported in the blood to the cells. Cells use glucose as fuel. The liver takes up glucose, converts it into glycogen and stores it. Glucose signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

Cells use glucose as fuel

Muscle takes up glucose, either using it as fuel or storing it as glycogen.

Glucose is converted to triglycerides and stored in fat (adipose tissue).
