a good parent when your child is compliant but a bad parent when they're not. What if they're perfect at age three and challenging at thirteen? And what if your child has additional needs? This is a book about parenting styles and what it takes to be a great parent. We know about tiger parents, helicopter parents, free range parents, but have you heard of Tesla parents, leaf blower parents, or iPhone 6 parents? So many styles, but is there one that actually works? Justin Coulson believes so. Drawing on up to the minute research in parenting science, as well as studies of childhood development, he shows how our children thrive when we understand and meet their basic psychological needs, how our job is not to fix our kids but to create an environment that supports their growth and development, and how children flourish when we minimise control but maximise our warmth and involvement and establish healthy boundaries. Not all children are the same and Justin considers a range of circumstances that you or your child might be in, including children with non-typical development. His revolutionary approach and practical strategies will encourage you to change the way you parent forever.

Ensuring Intellectual Freedom and Access to Information in the School Library Media Program Helen R. Adams, 2008-09-30. Over two thirds of all challenges to books and other resources reported to the ALA Office for Intellectual Freedom occur in schools. This book explores intellectual freedom issues in school library media programs, including selection of resources and materials, selection policies, challenges and censorship, students' freedom to read, patron privacy and confidentiality of library records, the blocking of Internet resources, access to the school library media center, its resources and services for students with special needs, and advocacy for minors. First Amendment rights in school library media programs. Throughout the text, practicing public school and private school library media specialists at different grade levels candidly share their stories and observations on how intellectual freedom principles and ALA policy statements apply to real life situations. Attorney Mary Minow provides vital information about the impact of the First Amendment, federal and state law, and court decisions on minors using libraries in schools. Whether a library media specialist in the field or a student in a graduate or undergraduate library and information studies program, readers will find both practical information and advice to complement the concepts found in the American Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Manual. Print and Web resources are included.
