Marijuana India. Hemp Drugs Commission, 1893-1894, 1969      Do Our Children Have a Chance? José R. Molinas Vega, Ricardo Paes de Barros, Jaime Saavedra Chanduvi, Louise J. Cord, 2011-11-16 The Human Opportunity Index HOI calculates how personal circumstances like birthplace wealth race or gender impact a child's probability of accessing the services that are necessary to succeed in life like timely education running water or connection to electricity It was first published in 2008 applied to Latin America and the Caribbean LAC The findings were eye opening behind the enormous inequality that characterizes the region's distribution of development outcomes income land ownership and educational attainment among others there is an even more worrying inequality of development opportunities It is not only rewards that are unequal it is also chances The problem is not just about equality it is about equity too The playing field is uneven from the start This book reports on the status and evolution of human opportunity in LAC It builds on the 2008 publication in several directions First it uses newly available data to expand the set of opportunities and personal circumstances under analysis The data is representative of some 200 million children living in 19 countries over the last 15 years Second it compares human opportunity in LAC with that of developed countries among them the US and France two very different models of social policy This allows for illuminating exercises in benchmarking and extrapolation And third it looks at human opportunity within countries across regions states and cities This gives us a preliminary glimpse at the geographic dimension of equity and at the role that different federal structures play The overall message that emerges is one of cautious hope LAC is making progress in opening the doors of development to all But it still has a long way to go At the current pace it would take on average a generation for the region to achieve universal access to just the basic services that make for human opportunity Seen from the viewpoint of equity even most successful nations lag far behind the developed world And intra county regional disparities are large and barely converging Fortunately there is much policy makers can do about it      Weekly News
