Hope and Kinship in Contemporary Fiction Gero Bauer, 2024-01-11 Explores the emphasis that contemporary novels films and television series place on the present arguing that hope emerges from the potentiality of the here and now rather than the future and as intimately entangled with negotiations of structures of belonging Taking its cue from an understanding of hope as connoting an organizing temporality one which is often presumed to be projecting into a future Hope and Kinship in Contemporary Fiction challenges this understanding arguing that hope emerges in practices of relationality in the present disentangling hope from a necessary correlation with futurity Through close readings of contemporary works including The Road The Walking Dead Cloud Atlas Sense8 The People in the Trees and A Little Life Gero Bauer investigates how these texts explore structures of kinship as creative and affective practices of belonging and care that claim spaces beyond the heterosexual reproductive nuclear family In this context fictional figurations of the child often considered the bearer of the future are of particular interest Through these interventions into definitions of and reflections on fictional manifestations of hope and kinship Bauer's analyses intersect with queer theory new materialism and postcritical approaches to literature and cultural studies moving towards counterintuitively hopeful readings of the present moment

"The" English Catalogue of Books, 1863 Post-apocalyptic Fiction Stewart Melville, 2014 Apocalypse as a literary device has manifold applications as it is a natural force of sweeping change a crucial component for a story Its scope and meaning can be manipulated to apply to different scenarios and change the rules under which a society operates which affects how the character behaves and reacts With the stories written for this portfolio an attempt was made to create a collage of instances in which Apocalypse is explored in varying forms and scopes from physical to allegory from societal to individual In doing so I feel that I have gained some insight into the ways in which a story functions and how characters are developed and explored by affecting change within them and their environment As a genre Apocalypse has always enjoyed popularity both in fiction and in popular thought And while it s traditional and popular depiction as a world ending event is well known what is less well known is the ways in which Apocalypse on smaller and narrower scales might affect individuals and societies As an event it is less about the end of the world and more about sweeping changes a way in which identity can be transformed thanks to its influence And this is likely what lies at the heart of its appeal the power it gives to people to change from an old state of being into an entirely new one From Apocalypse to Entropy and Beyond
