The Concept of Treaty in International Law Jan Klabbbers, 2023-09-25 Whether or not a certain norm is legally binding upon international actors may often depend on whether or not the instrument which contains the norm is to be regarded as a treaty In this study the author argues that instruments which contain commitments are ex hypothesi treaties In doing so he challenges popular notions proclaiming the existence of morally and politically binding agreements and so called soft law Such notions Klabbbers argues are internally inconsistent and founded upon untenable presumptions Moreover they find little support in the pertinent decisions of municipal and international courts and tribunals The book addresses issues of importance not only for academics working in international law constitutional law and political science but also for practitioners involved in the making implementation and enforcement of international agreements

Conclusion Des Traités Council of Europe, British Institute of International and Comparative Law, 2001-09-12 Treaty making constitutes the very basis of the international legal order and influences international relations It channels the expression by States of consent to be bound and defines the commitments they enter into However the national procedures by which States express their consent to be bound vary considerably depending on constitutional legal and political conditions which reflect the history of each country The report drawn up under the aegis of the Committee of Legal Advisers on Public International Law CAHDI of the Council of Europe encompasses the practice of thirty nine member States of this Organisation and a number of observer States It provides comprehensive and up to date information about these States means of expressing consent to be bound by a treaty Furthermore the analysis commissioned by the CAHDI from the British Institute of International and Comparative Law casts fresh light on this matter by inferring interesting considerations from the diversity of national procedures With this report the Council of Europe wishes to pursue its practical contribution to the development of international law facilitating the mutual understanding of its member States and thus helping to build a stable and peaceful international community La conclusion des traités constitue la base même de l'ordre juridique international et exerce une influence sur les relations internationales Elle véhicule l'expression du consentement des États traités et définit les engagements qu'ils souscrivent Cependant les procédures nationales par lesquelles les États expriment leur consentement traités varient considérablement en fonction de facteurs constitutionnels juridiques et politiques qui reflètent l'histoire même de chaque pays Le présent rapport laboré sous la guidance du Comité des Conseillers Juridiques sur le droit international public CAHDI du Conseil de l'Europe expose la pratique de trente neuf États membres de cette Organisation ainsi que d'un certain nombre d'États observateurs Il fournit des informations complètes et jour sur les moyens par lesquels ces États expriment leur consentement traités par un traité En outre l'analyse confiée par le CAHDI à l'Institut britannique de droit international et de droit comparé apporte un éclairage nouveau ce domaine en tirant des enseignements intéressants de la diversité des procédures nationales Par ce rapport le Conseil de l'Europe souhaite poursuivre sa contribution pratique au développement du droit international en facilitant la compréhension mutuelle de ses États membres et en contribuant ainsi à la construction d'une communauté internationale stable et pacifique
