Whats Right With Us Parents:

What Are Teens Thinking? Parent-Teen Conflict and Argument From the Teen Perspective Chris Buzzetta,2012-01-01

This study explored the embodied teen experience of parent teen conflict and argument using a hermeneutic phenomenological approach. Teens self identified as a living in a family with everyday conflict b not seeing a psychologist or counselor c not having been in any drug or alcohol treatment programs d not knowing the researcher ahead of time and e being between the ages of 13 to 19 at the time the interview took place. The following themes emerged: a feeling powerless, small, devalued and oppressed b experiencing irritation, frustration, hypocrisy, pettiness and defiance c wanting freedom and autonomy and the battle for control and d needing safe space and me time. Each theme and the whole embodied essence of this experience were interpreted through teens as well as the researcher's lenses. The interpretations provide insight for teens, parents and parent educators that may help improve parent teen relationships and provide strategies to use in the classroom setting.

Addresses and Journal of Proceedings of the American Normal School, and the National Teachers' Associations at American Normal School Association,1871 What Is Right for Children? Ms Karen Worthington, Professor Martha Albertson Fineman,2013-02-28. Combining feminist legal theory with international human rights concepts, this book examines the presence, participation and treatment of children in a variety of contexts. Specifically through comparing legal developments in the US with legal developments in countries where the views that children are separate from their families and potentially in need of state protection are more widely accepted. The authors address the role of religion in shaping attitudes about parental rights in the US with particular emphasis upon the fundamentalist belief in natural lines of familial authority. Such beliefs have provoked powerful resistance in the US to human rights approaches that view the child as an independent rights holder and the state as obligated to provide services and protections that are distinctly child centred. Calling for a rebalancing of relationships within the US family to become more consistent with emerging human rights norms, this collection contains both theoretical debates about and practical approaches to granting positive rights to children.
